Narrative: A backcountry skier contacted the Sheriff's Office to report he had been involved in a rock slide and avalanche on Wilson Peak. The skier reported he had taken a 2500 foot fall from near the summit of the mountain. Although he was very sore and had some abrasions from falling through a rocky couloir the man reported being uninjured. He was concerned however because his climbing/ski partner had not reached him after the fall and he lost his skis during the fall. The man was advised to get into as safe a spot as he could find and wait for his partner to ski to him. A deputy was able to eventually see the other man skiing towards the location of the man who fell. The ski partner was able to locate the missing equipment and the two made their way out without the need for assistance.
